

LASIK Surgery Increases Singer's Visual Range

"I feel better about myself, the way I look and the things I can accomplish."

Without glasses, Kelli Sorg could not see anything two inches past the end of her nose. Unfortunately, wearing glasses interfered with her career as a professional singer. "The spotlights reflected off my glasses and looked terrible, but I had to wear glasses on stage to keep from falling off the edge!" Glasses also prevented her from enjoying recreational activities. "I got hurt several times because my glasses bounced up and down on my nose while riding my horses."

Sorg decided she needed to do something to make her life easier. "I checked out the UK Web site and researched corrective surgery." She came across referrals for LASIK surgery by John Conklin, MD, of UK Refractive Surgery Service. "Dr. Conklin and his staff thoroughly explained everything in layman's terms. They made sure I understood everything."

Since the surgery, Sorg has discovered the benefits of having great vision. "I have peripheral vision, which I never had before. Also, I am a better driver now that my vision is restored." Sorg has a new outlook on her life. "I have been willing to take more risks, to sing more, even talk to new people because I feel better about myself, the way I look and the things I can accomplish."
